Y42V SOFTWARE

END USER LICENSE AGREEMENT

Creating Catalogs or Brochures | English | Version 1.0 | October 18, 2026

1. Parties, scope and acceptance

This End User License Agreement (“Agreement”) sets out the terms of use between Y42V Software (“Y42V”), the provider of the desktop application “Creating Catalogs or Brochures” (“Software”), and the individual or organization installing, activating or using it (“User”). Installing, activating or using the Software signifies acceptance of these terms. A User who does not accept them must not install the Software or must stop using it. This provision does not replace any additional requirements for express and informed consent under applicable law.

2. Nature of the licence and authorized licensing

The Software is licensed, not sold; ownership is not transferred. A right to use it is granted only under licensing terms offered and verified by Y42V. A valid licence may be obtained only from Y42V Software or official sales/activation channels expressly authorized by Y42V. Unauthorized third-party keys, counterfeit activations and licence documents not approved by Y42V do not constitute valid licences. Duration, scope, permitted devices/users and renewal terms depend on the plan stated at purchase or activation.

3. Prohibited licensing and technical interference

Users must not generate, imitate, duplicate, sell or distribute licence keys without authorization; use pirated or cracked copies; or bypass or disable licence validation, activation or technical protections. Unauthorized copying, representing the Software to others as properly licensed, or exceeding licence limits is also prohibited. Exceptions expressly permitted by applicable law remain unaffected. For violations, Y42V may, to the extent legally permitted, suspend or terminate access or the licence and exercise its legal rights.

4. Installation, system and security responsibilities

The User is responsible for obtaining the Software from trustworthy sources identified by Y42V, backing up files before installation, checking device and operating-system compatibility, maintaining current security precautions and consciously approving installation permissions. The User should assess compatibility with existing software, settings, data and workflows. This clause does not remove Y42V’s mandatory obligations under applicable law.

5. Responsibility for catalogs and brochures created

The User is responsible for selecting, verifying, updating, publishing and distributing the content of catalogs, brochures, advertisements, price lists, images, product descriptions and other outputs created using the Software. Before publication, the User must check prices, taxes, discounts, stock/product details, advertising claims and expiration dates. The Software does not automatically guarantee legal compliance or commercial accuracy of generated content.

6. Copyright, trademarks, personal information and legal compliance

The User is responsible for ensuring they have the necessary rights, permissions and licences for photographs, logos, trademarks, text, tables and other materials imported into the Software or used in outputs. The User must not produce or publish material infringing third-party intellectual property rights, misleading or unlawful content, or personal information used without authorization. Compliance with advertising, consumer protection, privacy, data protection and other relevant laws is the User’s responsibility.

7. Files, backups and data loss

The User should regularly back up source Excel/CSV/TXT files, product images, project files and generated PDF/PowerPoint outputs. Independent backups are recommended especially before bulk processing, software updates or overwriting files. The Software's ability to process a file does not guarantee that the data is error-free, complete or recoverable in every circumstance.

8. Updates, support and service changes

Y42V may release bug fixes, security improvements and new versions. The scope of updates and support terms depend on the active licence plan and terms announced by Y42V at the relevant time. No specific feature, uninterrupted service or indefinite support is guaranteed unless expressly committed to in writing. Mandatory consumer rights remain unaffected.

9. Warranties and limitations of liability

To the extent permitted by applicable law, the Software is provided with its stated features. Y42V does not guarantee uninterrupted or error-free operation on every device or with every data set. To the extent legally permitted, Y42V is not responsible for claims arising from incorrect prices, images, product information or advertising content published by the User. Nothing excludes intentional wrongdoing, gross fault, or warranties, remedies and consumer rights that cannot lawfully be limited.

10. Termination of the licence

The right to use the Software may end, subject to licence terms and applicable law, when the licence expires, a subscription is not renewed, or this Agreement is materially breached. Termination does not automatically transfer to Y42V the User's rights in content previously created lawfully. The User remains responsible for third-party content.

11. Intellectual property and ownership of outputs

Rights in the Software's source code, interface, trademarks and other components belong to Y42V or their respective rights holders. Subject to third-party rights, the User may use outputs made from materials they supplied and are legally entitled to use. The Software licence does not transfer Y42V's intellectual property rights.

12. Governing law and mandatory rights

This Agreement is intended to be interpreted under the laws of Québec, Canada, subject to applicable mandatory laws and non-waivable consumer rights in the User's location. This clause must not operate as an invalid imposition of governing law or jurisdiction. If a provision is found invalid, the remaining provisions are not necessarily affected.
